Kathy Redelman, RN

Each of our finalists exemplify the passion that everyone at Indianapolis Neurosurgical Group (ING) feels about solving our patient’s brain, spine and pain conditions in the most compassionate manner possible. Our three finalists prove we do brain surgery very well. ING is one of the largest neurosurgery practices in the country and is the statewide and regional referral destination for the most complex conditions of the brain, spine and nervous system.

We also treat simple and complex spine conditions. Other medical specialists seek our advice when more conservative treatments have not provided suitable pain relief to their patients.

Our spine surgeons work closely with our board-certified interventional pain management physicians. Whether or not surgery is an option, our pain specialists provide critical information to our surgeons by diagnosing the exact source of pain. They can give immediate therapeutic pain relief to that precise location of pain, all within the office setting, and critical information to help the surgeon.

The physicians at Indianapolis Neurosurgical Group are specially trained to understand the intricacies of the nervous system. This makes them the most qualified to address other pain issues like carpal tunnel syndrome, back pain, facial pain—using the latest endoscopic and minimally-invasive techniques to keep surgery safer and your recovery as short and pain-free as possible.
